Official statement – The WrangPlonet.net "no Tor" policy

Here at WrangPlonet.net, we observe a lot of the Internet's not so nice goings on and found that a weakness in the Internet as a whole is the Tor Project.

The Tor Project operates the Tor anonymity network, the idea is simple, you connect from your computer and your connection is routed through other nodes on the Tor network until leaving at an exit node to the destination, result of this is the exit node's IP rather than yours is shown, this creates a problem however.

The problem is that with this level of anonymity a criminal can easily commit an offence and be near untraceable, sadly the Tor Project have publicly refused to prevent abuse and assist the authorities as they cite that it can "weaken Tor".

It has been decided that WrangPlonet.net will no longer allow connections from Tor until such times as the Tor Project decides to assist the authorities in their duty to bring cybercriminals to justice.

Tor attracts some of the worst cybercriminals out there, as it provides the level of anonymity they need to commit crimes.

A writeup on Tor will be found on "Internet Annoyances" very soon, however WrangPlonet.net remains as is, Tor is not allowed, if you want to view WrangPlonet.net, please do so directly, until Tor is free of criminals.
